Although there has been no curling at the Didsbury rink for some time the local curlers went to Olds last week and lifted the Macdonald Brier Cup which Olds had won from Innisfail the previous week.

On Wednesday two rinks skipped by Frank Kaufman and Jack McCloy won the trophy by two points. McCloy beat John Currie by a score of 16-12, while Kaufman lost to Glen Warren 16-14.

The same evening the Didsbury curlers successfully defended the cup at the Olds rink when Kaufman won from W. E. Kemp 14-8; while H. Sorensen beat McCloy 14-12, thus the Didsbury curlers retained the trophy by four points.

Local rinks:

Kaufman, skip; Wordie, Fisher, and Irwin Kleio.

McCloy, skip; Jim Caithness, Jack Topley and Frank Heselton.

On Monday evening two rinks went to Olds and were successful in defending the cup against a couple of rinks from Innisfail.

Clint Reiber won easily from Earl Freeman by a score of 21 to 10, but Dave Sinclair lost to Percy Hill 16-13, Didsbury retaining the trophy by a margin of 8.

Local rinks:

Reiber, skip; Brusso, Krueger and Johnson.

Dave Sinclair, skip; A McNaughton, Herb Sinclair and Ed Watkins.

On Tuesday evening two Olds rinks challenged for the cup and came to Didsbury, but failed to lift it, Didsbury winning by a margin of two points.

Jim Caithness won from Herb Samis 6 up and Brusso lost to McLeod by 4 down.

Local Rinks:

Jim Caithness, skip; Jack Topley, Wordie and DeMann.

Brusso, skip; McCloy, Jack Caithness and Art Reiber.

Don't Pay Income Tax To Provincial Government

When a Government begs the public to "Please stop paying us income taxes"—its news. The Alberta government, through Hon. Solen E. Low, provincial treasurer, is doing just that. In spite of early warnings that the dominion and not the province, is collecting income taxes now, numbers of willing payers are filing returns and forwarding remittances to the provincial office.

It means unnecessary work for all concerned, including the return of the money to the taxpayers, said the minister.

The advice is once again given; Alberta is not collecting income tax on 1941 earnings, and will collect no more for the duration of the war. 1941 taxes are payable to the Dominion, as are all subsequent wartime income taxes.

Wording of Question On Plebiscite Ballot

Returning officers for the Dominion "manpower" plebiscite to be held April 27, were announced from Ottawa recently. It appears that officials who acted in the 1940 general election will be given similar duties in most ridings for the forth coming vote.

J. P. Ferguson, barrister and solicitor of Trochu, has been named returning officer for the Red Deer Constituency.

The Pioneer has received full information from Ottawa that the question to appear on the ballot in connection with the forthcoming plebiscite will read:

"Are you in favor of releasing the government from any obligation arising out of any past commitments restricting the methods of raising men for military service?"

5,000 Recruits Needed For Reserve Army

Appealing to all men who are able to carry a rifle, Military District 13 launched its campaign for the reserve army on Monday morning. M.D. 13 officials pointed out that recruiting of the Reserve up to full strength is urgent, in view of increasing tension in the Pacific and possibility of invasion. At least 5,000 men are required.

The groundwork of the reserve army is finished in this district by the 15th Alberta Light Horse.

From all these units, a brigade of the Reserve Army will be built up in M.D. 13, with a permanent headquarters staff, and intensive training will be begun so that it can go into action at short notice.

Using as many men as possible between the ages of 35 and 50, every effort will be made to bring all units up to strength as soon as possible. Military officials point out that men in that age class who are physically fit are not likely to be called for active service, and would form a permanent defense organization. Others eligible to join are boys between 17 and 18, and men between 19 and 35 who have a medical category of "C" as well as others who for special and acceptable reasons are unable to enlist for active service.

The period of training for the Reserve in the fiscal year beginning April 1 will be 40 days, spread over 12 months. The training will consist of 15 days in camp, 45 evenings (equivalent to 15 days) at their local headquarters, and ten days on outdoor manoeuvres.

Fields of training include anti-aircraft, bayonet fighting, field craft and

British Officer Recognizes Captured Nazi Pilot As German Page Boy

"Why, it's Gustav!" shouted a British officer as he rescued a Nazi pilot from his wrecked Messerschmitt 110, brought down by ack-ack guns in the Libyan desert.

Gustav had been a page boy in the hotel where the officer had stayed years ago in Germany. His father, the hotel's proprietor, had boasted that his son would be a first class hotelier. Now he was a Nazi pilot with the Iron Cross, on his way to a prison camp.

Gustav wasn't happy about his fate, he hated British Tommies for rescuing him from his blazing plane. "I'd rather die than fall into the hands of the swinish English," he screamed. His captors gave him a cup of tea to calm him down and to their surprise he took one sip and burst into tears.

He poured out his woes in German. He had read in newspapers that the English were beaten in Libya and that the Germans had won a great victory. "You dirty dogs, you tricked us," he burst out. "You pretended to be beaten at the Battle of Sidi Rezadh and that you had no more planes or tanks to stop us taking Egypt."

Gustav had heard this report while he was in action around Leningrad before he was recalled and sent into action in the Libyan campaign along with the hundreds of other German airmen. "We have reinforcements in the Middle East now. The R.A.F. is going to get its own back," said Gustav. "I would give my life to take part."

"Never mind," said the British officer, "you can go back to your hotel keeping. Maybe they'll make you maitre d'hotel in the concentration camp."

Tea Is Better Without Sugar According To Official Taster

C. J. Brown, official tea taster in the department of national revenue, who passes approval on the hundreds of tons of tea bought annually for the fighting services, gives this advice: "Don't put sugar in year tea if you want to enjoy its real flavor."

Besides making the tea taste better, 32,000 tons of sugar would be saved for other purposes if two out of three people who use sugar stop doing so, he added.

HEALTH IN INDUSTRY

The maintenance of health in industry, particularly war industry, was the theme of a three-day post-graduate medical course, given at the University of Toronto, recently.

The course, which was open to medical graduates, particularly industrial physicians, was the first of its kind ever given here. It followed by nearly three months a special course for industrial nurses given by the School of Nursing.

Dr. J. G. Cunningham, director of the Division of Industrial Hygiene, Ontario Department of Health, said the course was of special concern because it studied the major causes of lost time in industry.

Among the major causes are respiratory, gastro-intestinal, heart and ailments affecting the blood vessels and skin diseases. According to Dr. Cunningham, the course for nurses was particularly successful. There are five full-time industrial physicians in Ontario and 65 who are associated directly with industries on a retainer-part-time basis. There are also many physicians who are on call by firms for service in accident treatment.

Lectures in the course dealt with health supervision in industry, with accidental wounds, injuries and burns and the control and management of sickness among industrial workers.

Father Of Quints Refused Extra Gas Under Rationing Plan

Oliva Dionne, father of the quintuplets, is going to get just the same amount of gasoline as any other drive-for-pleasure motorist when rationing becomes effective April 1.

Mr. Dionne applied for inclusion in category "C" under rationing regulations on the ground that, as quint's guardian, he should be classed as a government official.

But, it was learned at Ottawa, that he is regarded as being in class "A"—entitled from 300 to 380 gallons of gasoline a year.

CHAPTER XIII.

"Can you tell me, please," a deep voice came from the big four-posted bed, "is this Heaven?" Christopher Sande made a movement as though to sit up, but reconsidering, sank back to the white pillow.

"Feeling better?" Tamar asked softly. "Sorry to disappoint you sir, but you're still in Georgia."

Sande touched the bandage about his head, being careful not to disturb the position of his right shoulder. "There was a loud crashing noise, and that's all I remember."

"It's just as well. That was late yesterday afternoon."

Sande had slept fitfully during the night, moaning in his half-unconscious state. Knox Randolph had spent most of the night sitting in the chair which she now occupied.

"I'm putting you to a lot of trouble. Am I going to live?" he grinned. "Now don't keep anything from me!"

Tamar smiled. "You'll be back at the Cricket Hill before this time next week, Dr. Forrester said. Lie still, now. Can you eat a little breakfast?"

"Well—no, I hardly think so. But never mind, I'll make up for it later." His eyes roved over the room. It was a pretty place, but a little femnine for the occupancy of a rough engineer, like himself, he thought with humor.

The next three days he was kept to his bed by Dr. Forrester. Tamar read to him.

Their conversation touched up many subjects and Tamar felt that she had known him for years. The fourth day Aristotle and Phoebe helped him downstairs to the little breakfast room where Tamar found him when she came down.

She saw the newspaper propped up in front of the host's chair and thinking it was her father, she said: "You're late this morning, aren't you?"

The paper moved. "Better late than never!"

Tamar laughed. "How did you ever get down those stairs by yourself?"

"Phoebe and her offspring helped me. Aristotle pulled and Phoebe pushed. We made it just before I collapsed." He grinned at her engagingly. "As a matter of fact, I feel disgustingly healthy this morning. I'm afraid I'll have to go back to work."

"It's too bad!" She touched the little silver bell at her place.

Phoebe came in with a tray of frosted orange juice in tall glasses. Tamar sat across the small table from Christopher, her eyes studying his face. The swelling had receded from his brow, but his right arm was still in its sling.

Christopher saw the tiny blue-veined tracery about her temples, noticed with pleasure the softness of her white hands. Her black hair lay in small curls about her forehead, flaunting the efforts of her brush.

And she was in white again. Another white linen dress. For the first time in his life, Christopher Sande had been conscious of a girl's wearing apparel.

Tamar wore blue occasionally, but she was loveliest in white. A row of blue wooden buttons marched down the front of the dress, and her eyes beneath the black lashes reflected their blueness.

The small hands moved quickly with the covered samovar. She poured amber-colored coffee, served golden toast and perfectly poached eggs.

"Phoebe is a marvel," Sande sighed. "My stay here has completely disrupted my morale. I don't want to leave. Do I have to?"

Tamar's lashes swept down over eyes that must have leaped. "Do you have to go?" she repeated his question, this time for his answer. "Why not stay on at Shadwell?"

"I'd never get anything done at Cricket Hill! Much as I'd like to live here the rest—" he broke off, quickly. "What's the news from the mine, Tamar?"

"Every thing is running smoothly. Of course, the major is anxious for you to get back, but I should say that the work is progressing."

After breakfast they strolled out to the terrace. Here a big green-striped umbrella shaded white chairs and a small round table. Tamar had handed him a cane in the hallway, and he leaned against her arm.

Tamar helped him into the chair and picked up a magazine. "This has all of the latest world news condensed into quick reading. This is the first copy. It came while you were in bed. I'll run up and make Mother comfortable, and be back down in a minute."

As Tamar hurried up the stairs, the telephone rang. "I'll take it up here," she called down to Phoebe who stirred in the kitchen hall.

"Tam?" Ransome Todd's voice said. "May I come out tonight?"

"Tonight, Ranny?"

"Yes, tonight, Tamar," he repeated. "May I?"

"Of course. Come right on from your office. And we'll have dinner." "I can't quite make it that early, but I'll be over for dinner."

Tamar walked slowly into her room. She sat down on the edge of her bed. Ranny would choose tonight. And there were so few evenings left when she could have Christopher Sande all to herself. Even now, she had to divide his time with her father; and yes, even Phoebe and Aristotle who had become his willing slave.

Of course, Ranny knew that Christopher was here. She made a sharp movement and sat up stiffly. That's why he hasn't called this week! And she reminded herself that she hadn't even missed him.

ing at Shadwell! The thing was incredible. Tamar recalled the last time she had seen him. He had acted downright hateful! She told herself, using one of Phoebe's favorite expressions.

She rose and went into her mother's room. "Mother, I've not meant to neglect you!" she murmured to Maris Randolph.

"Phoebe indicated there were goings-on between you and that young engineer, Tamar. She thinks you're on the verge of a great romance. Is there anything to it?" Maris was not just sure that she wanted a romance between Christopher Sande and her lovely daughter. Love could be so cruelly misplaced if it were not properly guided into the right channels.

Tamar's voice said breathlessly: "Phoebe has her head in the clouds most of the time. I can't see how she ever mixes a recipe, without having most of the ingredients missing."

"I'm going to fix a seat for you outside and Dad can carry you down for a sunbath this morning."

Maris wondered if Tamar had seen the gradual change in her or if by the very fact that she saw her almost hourly that there had been no visible change.

Quickly Maris sought to keep her mind from the subject. "Did Phoebe give you a good breakfast? And how is Mr. Sande this morning?"

"He's reading the new magazine out on the lawn, and he ate a hearty breakfast, as though he'd been riding to hounds—or—" her voice trailed off. She remembered red jacketed men on splendid horses, the baying of hounds, the sound of a horn, hooves flying. What horses! The flashing colors of sleeky coated animals. Long-legged symmetry, deep chested, long-bodied speed kings, proudly lifting their noble heads to strain forward in powerful drive.

The hunt breakfasts! Tamar knew that her own memories were heavily spiced with old Cran's tales of the earlier days in the Big House.

Maris Randolph knew what chain of associations her daughter's broken sentence had brought. Tamar had rekindled the love of the old, in the Big House, and had often declared that she was the physical embodiment of that first Tamar Randolph.

"Co'se you is, honey. De conjure man say dat in de thid' generation dey returns to de livin'."

"What kind of conjure man was that, Aunt Phoebe?" Ranny would ask skeptically.

"Nev' mind, honey." Phoebe would say to Tamar. "Dem as is undisbelievin' ain' no chance t' know 'bout sech."

Well, Maris thought ruefully, Tamar was a convert to Phoebe's teachings. She certainly was not an "undisbeliever." It had worried her for a long time, but Knox had said to let her alone with her imagination. They couldn't hurt her if they were properly anchored with practical activities!

Tamar plumped up the pillows. "Shall I tune in the radio for your serial story?" Her fingers moved about the dial of the small radio. "Ranny is coming to dinner," she said. Her eyes on the numbers. "I really wish he wouldn't tonight."

Maris caught the glimpse of two small furrows between the straight black brows. Signal of disturbance in Tamar's thoughts.

"Oh, it should be a very pleasant occasion. Why don't you call Selby, darling, and ask her in, too. That would make a nice foursome."

"Mother! You really are a whiz!" Tamar grasped at the suggestion. "Whiz?"

"A word meaning marvel. A sage, a mastermind, an unraveler of chaos. A smoother-over, a Mr. Fix-it... a well, simply a whiz!"

Tamar was laughing now, and leaning over, kissed her mother quickly, and squeezed her slender hands. "I'll call Selby. She'll be delighted."

And Selby was delighted. "You dear! Tam! Of course I'll come. Imagine my getting to spend the whole evening with Christopher!"

Tamar stared glumly at the telephone. That wasn't the idea at all, she told its indifference.

GEMS OF THOUGHT

TRUTH

Truth is the gravitation principle of the universe, by which it is supported, and in which it inheres. —Everts.

Truth and love are two of the most powerful things in the world; and when they both go together they cannot easily be withstood. Cudworth.

Error always addresses the passions and prejudices; truth scorns such mean intrigue, and only addresses the understanding and the conscience. —Azel Backus.

In the desolation of human understanding, divine Love hears and answers the human call for help; and the voice of Truth utters the divine verities of being which deliver mortals out of the depths of ignorance and vice. —Mary Baker Eddy.

Of all duties, the love of truth, with faith and constancy in it, ranks first and highest. To love God and to love truth are one and the same. —Silvio Pellico.

Religious truth, touch what points of it you will, has always to do with the being and government of God, and is, of course, illimitable in its reach. Hitchcock.

Less Sugar Used

Present Honor Rationing System Is Believed Effective

While Canada's complete sugar picture as it has developed since the honor system of sugar rationing became effective in late January is not available, authorities said it was known that rationing had decreased household consumption substantially.

Sugar-rationing coupons still are part of the uncertain future, but the Wartime Prices and Trade Board is not inclined to the belief that the present rationing system, largely voluntary in its operation, is a failure.

A board statement stressed the responsibility of retailers in seeing that heavy purchases of sugar by individuals are not encouraged.

"Of one thing we are sure, and that is that restaurants, hotels and similar establishments, and bake-shops, soft-drink factories and industrial plants requiring sugar have reduced their consumption in observing specific instructions of the board," an official said.

Apart from the fact it may not be necessary, the board is understood to be opposed to sugar rationing on the coupon system because of the expense involved. Should rationing of other foodstuffs become necessary, a large-scale system of coupons for the food needs of Canadians could be developed and sugar would then be included as the cost of handling one additional product would not be large once the system was established.

There seems to be plenty of pepper for two or three years' consumption. Canada is said to have sufficient for at least a year and United States buyers bought heavily from the Dutch East Indies prior to the war, sufficient, it is said to last them about three years. But on account of extra storage and other costs some spice prices have been advancing across the line.

FARMER'S WIFE HAS LOTS OF TIME FOR EVERYTHING

In case you should not believe that "the farmer's wife has got time for everything," read this; it was sent to a well known national magazine by a farmer's wife!!

"The farmer's wife has no excuse for not being cultured and up-to-date. All she has to do is to cook the meals and wash the dishes and mop the floor and scrub the steps and wash the clothes and mend the linen and darn the socks and milk the cows and churn the butter and feed the chickens and bathe the children and can the fruit and cut the children's hair and set the dog on tramps and chase the cat out of the milk house and polish the silver and black the stove and straighten the shades and settle the children's scraps and shoo the hens off the porch and wipe up the mud father and the boys track in and bake the bread and make the cake and chase the pigs out of the garden and answer the telephone and sift the ants out of the sugar and air the feather beds and heat the water for father to wash his feet and watch out for bed bugs and get the men up in the morning and gather the eggs and set the hens and keep the neighbor's baby while she goes to town and get the children off to school and get rid of insurance agents and spray the fruit trees and gather the berries and trim the lamps and swat the flies and empty the ashes and slop the pigs and peel the peaches and rake the lawn and feed the pet lambs and string the beans and fill the lantern and sort the apples and find the men's collar buttons and carry in the wood and pick the geese and answer the door and tell the men what they did with the axe the last time they used it and write a letter to mother. Then in the afternoon she can go to the missionary meeting and work her head off for the heathen."

The World of Wheat

By H. G. L. Strange
Director, Research Department.
Searle Grain Company, Ltd.

Prairie farmers, it is evident, are anxious and willing to increase their flax acreage to assist Canada in securing more oil for war purposes.

Flax intended for seed should be tested for germination. The seed should not be treated with formaldehyde but with a mercurial dust, either Ceresan or Leytosan, following the manufacturer's directions most carefully.

The new Royal Flax, or the variety Bison, are suitable for Saskatchewan and Manitoba; Red Wing for Alberta; seeding at from 25 to 40 pounds to the acre. Flax should not be seeded to stubble, but only on summerfallow that is reasonably free from weeds. The University of Saskatchewan obtained good results sowing flax and wheat together on the same field, using half a bushel of flax and half a bushel of wheat, or three pecks of wheat and one peck of flax.

Combination sowing must be as shallow as possible, or the flax can be seeded separately and shallow immediately after the wheat. Flax for seed must be well cleaned from weed seeds. An ordinary fanning mill, with the proper screens, will make a good job of cleaning flax provided the rate of cleaning is slowed down, and the machine is kept absolutely level.

Registered or certified seeds are the best because relative freedom from weed seeds, high germination and the best yields are ensured.

The following factors have tended to raise price: Crop prospects in Continental Europe continue to be unfavorable; Spain's 1941 wheat crop has been revised downward; heavy supplies of American and Canadian wheat are going to Mexico; navigation on the Great Lakes is expected to open much earlier this season.

The following factors have tended to lower price: The United Kingdom plans to increase still further production of bread grains; unfavorable war news from the Pacific southwest has unsettled North American markets; North American and Argentine supplies of wheat and corn are of record proportions.

Fishermen's Reserve of the Royal Canadian Navy Are Patrolling Waters of Pacific

The fishing season on the west coast won't open until May, but British Columbia fishermen are out hunting now—for bigger catches than salmon or halibut. They're after submarines and mines.

All up and down Canada's fjorded Pacific shores, fishermen—members of the Fishermen's Reserve of the Royal Canadian Navy are voluntarily patrolling the seas, protecting their own home waters. Their vessels aren't cruisers or destroyers or even corvettes. The ships in which they go to war are the same ones they made their living in—tiny wooden halibut boats and salmon boats. Today these boats sport coats of grey, and business-like wireless masts, and carry machine guns and paravanes instead of nets and hooks.

Organized by far-visioned naval authorities in 1938, the Fishermen's Reserve is playing an invaluable role in the defence of Canada. The hardy British Columbia coast, with its rocky approaches, is the west's greatest natural safeguard. But it must be watched constantly since some of its inlets could serve as hideouts if submarines slipped through the protecting ring of British, United States and Canadian warships.

Before the war in the Pacific the Reserve was occupied chiefly in watching Japanese fishing vessels. Now, with the Japanese fishing fleet rounded up, Reservemen are on more exciting assignments—sweeping the sea-lanes for mines deposited by low-flying planes and undersea craft, looking for submarines and other signs of enemy activity.

They are aided by other volunteers—woodsmen, fishermen and others scattered along the thinly-inhabited coast who by telephone and personal message contact naval authorities or the Reserve when they see anything suspicious.

Reserve boats are equipped to land shore parties to investigate.

They may be natural-born sailors and sturdy and healthy, but even fishermen can't be in the navy without some sort of official training. So men who have spent most of their lives at sea must go to naval school for two weeks after they've donned R.C.N. blue. At William's Head school on Vancouver island they learn a few fundamentals—drill, rifle and machine gun firing, signalling, something about depth charges and scientific navigation.

Instructors admit that discipline is tough to instil and it's impossible to make finished tars of fishermen in that two-week period. The salute, for instance, isn't as snappy as that given by the man whose home is on a destroyer. But what Reservemen do better than anyone else is to keep their tiny craft sweeping in and out of the treacherous inlets that stud the coast.

It's a 100 per cent. fisherman's job even to the boat. The halibut and salmon boats in the Reserve, valued at about $25,000 each, are owned mainly by their fishermen skippers who rent them to the navy for an average of $8 a day.

This, plus salary of $4.75 a day, earned with the rank of coxswain, is just about half what a skipper made in peacetime.

In a good pre-war season, he would clear between $8,000 and $10,000 for himself. His men would each make about $2,500. They have given up their comfortable peacetime return for the modest wage of an able seaman.

Nazi Officer Explains

Prisoner Of War In Cairo Tells How He Was Captured

A German staff officer, prisoner of war in Cairo, was asked how he was captured.

"I'm not sure," he replied. "I was driving in the desert in a staff car with General Rommel and some other officers. We were pursued by British armored cars.

"The last thing I heard was the General saying 'There are too many in this car.'

"The next thing I knew I was lying on the ground."—London News-Chronicle.

Proving Successful

United States Using Blimps For Patrol And Convoy Work

The United States is using lighter-than-air blimps for in-shore patrol work along the coast against submarines and for convoy work.

They evidently are proving successful because more are being built and it is expected a considerable number soon will be in service to supplement the work of airplanes and surface ships.

They can hover over an object, they can cruise at the speed of a convoy or they can speed up to 70 or 75 miles an hour; they can remain in the air infinitely longer than planes, and they can anchor themselves to the water to transship men and supplies from surface tenders.

The blimps now in use are 250 feet long and the gas bag has a volume content of more than 400,000 cubic feet of helium. They weigh in excess of 10 tons and carry a crew of 10 or 12. Powered by two airplane engines and with a range of more than 2,000 miles, they carry machine guns, bombs and depth charges and are in radio communication with shore bases and ships at sea.

The United States is the only big power to cling to the use of the airship and that may be due to the fact that Texas has the only known deposits of helium, a non-inflammable gas that can be ignited only under pressure.

A Very Bad Habit

Is Eating Little Or No Breakfast According To Health League

What did you have for breakfast this morning? Orange juice and coffee? Maybe just toast and coffee. Perhaps nothing at all? That's a bad habit, according to the Health League of Canada.

Between dinner and breakfast is the longest gap in time that comes between any meals and when you get up in the morning your stomach is nearly empty. Therefore, it is pointed out, you have no food to call on as a source of energy all morning, and your work and all your activities will suffer.

The Health League advises a fruit or fruit juice first for breakfast. Next, you should have either cereal with milk or cream or some cooked dish of eggs or meat, like sausage or bacon with or without pancakes. Toasted whole wheat bread is better than ordinary white bread, because it has more Vitamin B.

One of the most important food elements in breakfast, for adults and children both, says the experts, is milk. Plenty of it should be available for cereals or cocoa or just to take plain, along with the above-suggested food.

Weather Experts

Meteorologists Thought They Had Made A New Discovery

The so-called "cold front" which meteorologists thought they discovered 20 years ago, was known to Alexander Dallas Bache, great-grandson of Benjamin Franklin and a professor at the University of Pennsylvania in 1841.

The chagrin of the modern meteorologists was disclosed by F. W. Reichelderfer, chief of the U.S. Weather Bureau, at a recent meeting of the American Philosophical Society, which was founded in Philadelphia 1743 by Franklin.

The present-day weather experts probably are entitled to credit for dubbing the phenomenon a "cold front," but the records show clearly that it is the same thing which Bache described as "passage of a line squall."

Reichelderfer explained that the "cold front," which is so important to modern weather prediction methods, is composed of several million cubic miles of cold air originating in the polar regions. The air drifts southward and produces "fine, clear weather in winter and summer.

Supplying The Power

Workers In Munitions Factories Are Real Fighters In This War

"Remember the Axis challenged you," said Mr. Ian Findlay, who recently gave the postscript to the BBC 9 o'clock news. "For years it sneered at you, and called you decadent. Now it threatens you with slavery.

"Remember, the key to Hitler's conquests has not been on the battlefield. Panzers, Stukas paratroops—they're only the spearhead; it's the thrust behind the spear you've to look for. It's not the German soldier who put Hitler where he is; it's the fact that the German soldier never wants for a Tommy-gun or a tank to support him, or a Stuka to blast the way for him, or even for a net to keep off the midges that might impair his efficiency. The mechanic with a spanner in Dortmund, the woman sewing parachutes in Stuttgart, even the clerks at their card indexes in the Wilhelmstrasse—those are the people who lay the power at Hitler's feet. Those are the people you've got to beat. You can't beat them just with bombs; there are too many of them, in too many places. You must beat them at their jobs. At bottom, this is a fight between you and someone who's doing just exactly your job somewhere in Germany. He's sweating at it, that other man, sweating in terror. Behind him is the Gestapo. Behind that is Himmler. Behind that is Hitler. There's no one behind you but yourself; so it's you against the Gestapo and Himmler and Hitler. No, that's not quite right; behind you are a couple of hundred million people desperate for deliverance, watching in an agony of hope for everything that comes from your hands. A slack day or a scamped job will not get you a firing squad."—London Times.

Old Bank Notes

Over 60 Years Old, Are Now Used To Purchase War Bonds

The Canadian Bank of Commerce, Kincaid, Sask., is in possession of a number of old bills which have been used to buy Victory Bonds. These bills include two four-dollar Molson's Bank notes dated 1875, a two-dollar Dominion of Canada note, 1878, a one-dollar Merchants' Bank note, 1878, and a five-dollar Bank of Montreal note, 1871.

Several of these bills are practically unsoiled, showing that they have been carefully preserved by some collector who has now decided that they would serve an excellent purpose by helping to provide the tools to finish the job.

Many Still On Land

Of 6,164 soldier settlers who settled in Saskatchewan under the soldier settlement board after the First Great War, 2,308 still are on the land. G. H. Castleden (C.C.F., Yorkton) was informed in the commons. Indebtedness of these still on the land is $3,864,905, original indebtedness of all settlers was $25,576,332.

Definite Need To Increase The Acreage Sown To Flax, A Vital Necessity For War

Debt To Jack Miner

Beloved Naturalist Has Given To The World A Bird Sanctuary

Had Jack Miner devoted his ability for original thought to make some new contraption of a mechanical kind, he could have had a patent on it, and perhaps have made himself another Ford or Edison. But his thinking carried along a different line, and so he only invented a bird sanctuary attachment to a farm. He probably has had more enjoyment out of his inventions than any mechanical genius of them all. Perhaps also he may have made some money, incidentally telling audiences how he brought down beauty out of the sky where others can only cause it to spring from the earth. Such money in the days of his lecture career went to build up his place.

But had he made millions, the Dominion of Canada and the world at large would still be his debtor for he has proven that argument could never prove to the attentive public that wild life is a good thing and practicable. Let it be granted that others before Jack Miner's time and during the generations that have grown up since his experiments began, have done much good work in the same line, yet it remains true, in this and in every form of advance, that one person stands forth in the public eye as embodying the whole movement. Not Watt but a succession of inventors made the steam engine; not Bell but many electrical experiments made the telephone. Jack Miner, Canada's beloved naturalist, in this sense has given us the Bird sanctuary.—Ottawa Citizen.

Smokeless Powder

Alcohol Is Needed In Manufacture And Used In Big Guns

Dr. C. S. Boruff, technical director of a distilling plant, predicts that gin will soon disappear from American bars, and its alcoholic content will be used to "make Mickey Finns for the Axis."

Boruff said alcohol is needed in the manufacture of smokeless powder, which is used in firing big guns. The "kick" may be taken from other beverages as the need for alcohol in the manufacture of ammunition increases, Boruff said.

"Smokeless powder, so-called, looks like short pieces of spaghetti," he said. Cotton fibres are treated with strong acids to make gun cotton. After certain mechanical operations the cellulose nitrate or gun cotton, is mixed with alcohol and then with other stuffs. This results in a sort of jelly-like mass, solid enough to be forced through dies. It is then cut to desired lengths."

The alcohol and others serve as "carriers" in the drying process, he said.

The present prospects are that Canada will soon be in urgent need of more vegetable oils. These oils may be classified into two main groups, the drying oils used in paints and other protective coatings, and non-drying oils used chiefly in soaps and edible products such as shortening, salad oils, etc. Flax is the main source for drying oils although before the war tung and perilla oils were imported from China and Manchuria to supplement the supply of linseed oil. Non-drying vegetable oils, however, are consumed in far greater quantity and for these the main sources were coconut, peanut, palm and palm kernel imported from the Orient, with lesser quantities of olive, soybean and cottonseed oil imported from other sources. It is evident therefore that the spread of the war in recent months has cut off an important source of supply of Canada's vegetable oils and as a consequence there may be a shortage, says W. G. McGregor, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

The seed-bearing type of flax is the only oil-producing crop now grown in Canada outside of certain areas suitable for the production of soybeans. Flaxseed is consumed by the linseed oil industry which produces oils used chiefly in paints, linoleum, soaps, printers' ink, putty and varied other domestic products. While linseed oil is not ordinarily considered an edible oil, manufacturers of edible products have used it for this purpose in the past. American processors purchased considerable quantities in an endeavour to make up the domestic shortage of vegetable oils during the last war and again in 1937 due to a shortage caused by the drought.

With industrial activity at the peak, increased quantities of linseed oil will be required for maintenance and expansion and new demands will be made as a result of the war.

Many farmers will be anxious to produce a crop which will play a vital part in the war effort. While efforts will be made to increase the production of soybeans and other sources of fats, there is a definite need for an increase in acreage of flax in 1942. Although Canadian production of 6½ million bushels in 1941 is an appreciable increase over that of recent years, it is estimated that 20 million bushels could be absorbed during 1942.

High-Vitamin Flour

Product Of Canadian Mills May Be Shipped To Britain

Scientific advisers to the British food ministry have examined high-vitamin content flour produced by new Canadian milling methods from rust-resistant wheat, with the possibility that in the future quantities of this product may be shipped to the United Kingdom, agriculture department officials said.

"Fortified" flour, with vitamins added, has long been used in the United Kingdom, but the Canadian process requires no additions and retains in flour of good appearance the high vitamin qualities contained in western wheat.

When Canadian mills develop the milling process with the new equipment numbers of them are obtaining, it would be possible for the United Kingdom to obtain its high-vitamin flour at lower cost, as the expense of adding vitamin artificially would be eliminated. The British decision will depend on the report made by the three scientific advisers who visited Canada.

Flour and bread prepared under processes which retain vitamin vigor are expected to be marketed in Canada under government standards on April 15. At first, it was planned to have the standards effective in February, but delays in obtaining necessary new equipment for manufacture caused a postponement in introduction.

The cold in Russia is even more remarkable than the cold of the Canadian prairies, which is so dry that nobody feels it. In Russia the Russians don't feel it, but the Germans do.

The skills and training of every worker in Canada must be known in order that they may be used to the best advantage. This is the first step towards complete registration of man-power.

Renew Unemployment Insurance Books Before April 1

To avoid duplication of effort, the above registration is being combined with the renewal of Unemployment Insurance Books.

A supply of new books will be mailed promptly on receipt at your local Employment and Claims Office, of completed registration forms and the old books stamped for the last pay period in March.

For details consult the Commission's Local Office without delay.
